

Use this paper as a scratch sheet to organize your thoughts.
You don't have to use all the bullet points for paragraph topics;
cross out what you don't need and add topics that make more sense to you.
Use the white space to jot down ideas that fit each topic.
Read through topics you've chosen to work with, and decide if they're in a good order.
Use numbers in the margin if you want your paragraphs (topics) in a different order.
If your ideas call for it, by all means, illustrate!

Imagine a shop in town with clothing (or some other kind of product) designed just for and by kids.

- What kind of clothing does it offer? Active wear? Formal wear? Something completely different?

- Describe 2 different outfits. If it isn't clothing, describe some key items.

- What's the price range?

- Who decided which designers would be featured? How do you get in if you're a designer?

- Do only kids shop there?
